Climate Change and Consumption Conference April 18-19, 2008

This conference brings together experts from law, the humanities, and the natural, social, and behavioral sciences to discuss whether climate change challenges academics and policymakers to confront questions about limiting or redirecting our patterns of consumption. It will examine how laws, policies, values, social factors, and information can influence changes in individual, household, and community greenhouse gas emissions, and citizen pressure for policies and political action.
